Introduction

Oman Legal Citation Standard (OLCS) is a guide for citing primary Omani legal authorities in academic works and legal documents. It aims to create a consistent standard for citing Omani legislation and other primary legal sources in a way that makes it easy for the reader to identify the sources used and to predict their citation.

OLCS is designed as a supplement to the Oxford Standard for Citation of Legal Authorities (OSCOLA) exclusively in regard to Omani primary legal sources. The users of OLCS should refer to OSCOLA for general formatting rules as well as all matters relating to international law sources and secondary sources.

For guidance on how to translate the titles of Omani legal authorities from Arabic into English, we recommend that you refer to the Irfan Rulebook.

1. Primary Legislation

OLCS considers royal decrees and laws as two distinct categories of primary legislation. Nowadays, all laws are issued by royal decree, but not all royal decrees are concerned with the issuance of laws. It is extremely important to pay attention to the distinction between royal decrees and laws, because the first article of a royal decree issuing a law is not the first article of the law itself.

1.1. Royal Decrees

The components of a typical royal decree citation are the royal decree number, the title of the royal decree, the date the royal decree was issued, the date the royal decree was published in the Official Gazette, and the issue number of this Official Gazette. Do not italicise any aspect of a royal decree citation. The royal decree number starts with the sequence number on the left and the year on the right. Do not write ‘No’ or ‘Number’ next to the number and do not leave a space before or after the slash sign (/).

The components of a typical royal decree citation are:

royal decree number royal decree title (date issued, date published) OG number
--

EXAMPLE 1

Royal Decree 43/2016 Granting Omani Nationality (issued 18 August 2016, published 20 August 2016) Official Gazette 1159.

It is acceptable, and recommended, to abbreviate ‘Official Gazette’ to ‘OG’.

EXAMPLE 2

Royal Decree 123/2010 Establishing the Sohar Free Zone (issued 20 December 2010, published 15 December 2010) OG 925.

The date of the publication of the royal decree in the Official Gazette can be extremely important because the entry into force of a royal decree may take place after a specific period of time calculated from its publication date, not its issuance date. Therefore, you should always cite the publication date.

1.2. Laws

The components of a typical law citation are the name of the law plus the year in which it was issued along with the full citation of the royal decree that issued this law without providing its actual title. There is no need to mention ‘as amended’ as it is assumed that you are citing the law as it is applicable today.

The components of a typical law citation are:

name of the law | year | royal decree number | (date issued, date published) | OG number

EXAMPLE 1

The Law for Combating Money Laundering and Financing Terrorism 2016, Royal Decree 30/2016 (issued 2 June 2016, published 5 June 2016) OG 1149.

Laws used to be promulgated in the 1970s without issuing a royal decree. If you are citing such an old law, replace the reference to the royal decree with the reference to the law without the need to repeat the name of the law twice.

EXAMPLE 2

Commercial Register Law 1974, Law No 3/74 (issued 14 May 1974, published 1 June 1974) OG 56.

2. Secondary Legislation

Secondary legislation includes decisions issued by the Council of Ministers, individual ministerial or governmental decisions, local orders, and other legal documents of an executive nature. In a manner similar to the distinction between laws and the royal decrees that promulgate them, it is necessary to distinguish between regulations and the decisions that issue them, as the first article of the regulation is not the same as the first article of the decision.

2.1. Decisions, Local Orders, and Similar Documents

The components of a typical ministerial or governmental decision citation are the name of the entity issuing the decision, the number of the decision, the title of the decision, the date the decision was published in the Official Gazette, and the issue number of this Official Gazette. Do not italicise any aspect of a ministerial decision citation. The ministerial decision number starts with the sequence number on the left and the year on the right. Do not use ‘No’ or ‘Number’ next to the number, and do not leave a space before or after the slash sign (/). The rules in this section apply to decisions and similar documents issued by government entities even if they are not actual ministries.

The components of a typical ministerial decision citation are:

entity name decision number decision title (date issued, date published) OG issue

EXAMPLE 1

Ministry of Heritage and Tourism Ministerial Decision 136/2021 Forming the Government Committee for Licensing Integrated Tourism Complexes and Its Working System (issued 12 September 2021, published 26 September 2021) OG 1409.

2.2. Circulars and Unpublished Decisions

For circulars and other similar documents that are not published in the Official Gazette, cite the entity name, the circular number, the circular title (if there is one), the date in which it was published, and add ‘unpublished’ at the end.

The components of a typical circular or any other unpublished decision citation are:

entity name | decision number | decision title | (date issued, unpublished)

EXAMPLE 1

Tender Board Circular 4/2012 (issued 21 May 2012, unpublished).

EXAMPLE 2

Ministry of Civil Service Circular 2/2014 regarding the Form for Modifying the Organisational Structure of Government Entities Subject to the Civil Service Law and Its Regulation (issued 9 January 2014, unpublished).

2.3. Regulations and Bylaws

The components of a typical regulation or bylaw citation is the name of the regulation plus the year in which it was issued along with the full citation of the ministerial decision that issued this regulation without providing its actual title.
